MEDIUM, IS DEAD

MEDIUM

Munsterberg Told of Seance.

Of all the published expositions regarding Palladino's methods, by far the most interesting was from the pen of Dr. Munsterberg, who was apparently as assiduous in those days in exposing spiritualistic charlatans as he was several years later in extolling German kultur. Dr. Munsterberg asserted that during a seance around a table Palladino was able to withdraw her feet from her shoes without attracting the atdino was able to withdraw her reset from her shoes without attracting the attention of the people who had placed their feet on top of her shoes as a safe-guard against trickery. Then being possessed of extraordinary flexibility of her knee, ankle and toe joints she was able to use her feet like hands and with them would pluck at the sleeves of the sitters are not the table or lift the sitters, rap on the table or lift the table. But Dr. Munsterberg's description of the medium's personality is as interesting as his expose of her methods.

"When I came to my first seance with Eusaple Palladino," he said, "I expected to see that disagreepile Italian peasant vuigar. Instead I found a lady who must have been extremely beautiful in youth, with a delicate humor around her eyes, with an expression of sympathy and almost of brilliance in her face, with a vive of brilliance in her face. to see that disagreeable Italian peasant her eyes, with an expression of sympathy and almost of brilliance in her pathy and almost of brilliance in her pyrnes had a strong liking for his new face, with a vivacity and eleverness detective and encouraged in every way which would have attracted me in all his fondness for investigation work. It pathy and almost of brilliance in her face, with a vivacity and cleverness which would have attracted me in all most any parior. This impression grew and it was emphasized by seeing how much she evidently suffered from the efforts of the seances."

Then Dr. Munsterherg told how he caught the celebrated medium by the heel during the seance which took place in a room in the London Arcade in this city. The professor said:

"If her foot had not been caught that was then but a vast and thinly peopled was then but a vast and thinly peopled."

The professor said:

In the whole seance, and the cabinet quarters In the whole seance, and the cabinet quarters when Col. Roosevelt left and mysteries worked in our presence would never have been under stricter conditions. Her greatest wonders are but fraud and humbug; this is no longer at theory but a proven fact. I should regret to interfere with the ample profits of her remarkable art, but—lucky Euspia—I do not think there is any reallives. There were some stormy passages sapla—I do not think there is any reason for such a fear. There are ever so
